QUESTION:- Discuss the scoot's model of motivation and human needs and Kimble and Gammezy motivation behaviour model. (10 marks)

ANSWER:- SCOOT'S MODEL OF MOTIVATION AND HUMAN NEEDS

(I) Need: Any need present in the individual does not necessarily lead to action. The need has to be activated which is the function of incentive. Need is the starting point of motivation. An unsatisfied need creates tension that stimulates drives within the individuals. These drives generate a search behaviour to achieve a particular goal that will satisfy the need and lead to reduction of tension.

Needs may be associated with Intimacy objectives like needs of Acquisition, Retention and orderliness. Needs may also be concerning Human power like Dominance, Autonomy and Differences etc.

NEEDS AND MOTIVATION RELATIONSHIP

    graph LR
      NEED --> TENSION
      TENSION --> SEARCH
      SEARCH --> PERFORMANCE
      PERFORMANCE --> REWARD
      REWARD --> NEED
      REWARD --> NEEDSAT[NEED SATISFACTION]
      NEEDSAT --> TENSION

STRATEGIC MANAGEMENT PROCESS

Strategic management process can be defined as 'a combination of managerial decisions and actions that determines the long-run performance of a corporation. It includes environmental observation, strategic planning, formulation, implementation, evaluation and control.

CRUCIAL CONSIDERATIONS

- Demand: No business can expect demand forecasting for products unless he is having strategic planning for the organizational development. Hence, long-range planning is necessary to meet the demand.
- Competition: Business entities should always fight for survival when there are new entrants in the market there will be more competition. Hence, strategic planning is necessary to face competition and to become successful businessman.

Case Study on SEBI

On April 12, 1988, the Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI) was established with a dual objective of protecting the rights of small investors and regulating and developing the stock markets in India. In 1992, the Bombay Stock Exchange (BSE), the leading stock exchange in India, witnessed the first major scam masterminded by Harshad Mehta (Mehta). Analysts unanimously felt that if more powers had been given to SEBI, the scam would not have happened. As a result, the Government of India brought in a separate legislation by the name of 'SEBI Act 1992' and conferred statutory powers to it. Since then, SEBI had introduced several stock market reforms. These reforms significantly transformed the face of Indian stock markets. SEBI introduced on-line trading and demat of shares which did away with the age-old paper-based trading, thus bringing more transparency into the trading system. Analysts and experts appreciated SEBI for these reforms. One stock market analyst said, "I'm sure that most of us would agree that SEBI has handled the challenges exceptionally well. In spite of SEBI's capital market reforms and increasing regulatory powers over the years, analysts felt that it had failed miserably in stopping stock market scams. In the ten years after the Mehta scam, several scams came to light, casting doubt on the efficiency of SEBI as a regulatory body. However, a few analysts felt there was a need to confer more powers to SEBI to stop these scams. One analyst commented, "It's rather daunting task of putting in place a regulatory framework for the market against all odds." In the 1980s, Indian capital markets witnessed significant changes. During the sixth Five-Year plan (1980-85), many major industrial policy changes were introduced. These included opening up the Indian economy to foreign corporations and emphasizing a greater role for the private sector. Many companies tapped the primary market to raise required funds from the public. The total capital raised from the primary market increased from Rs 1.96 bn in the fiscal 1979-80 to Rs. 65 bn in 1989-90. With more companies raising money by issuing shares, retail investors got another investment avenue to park their surplus funds. Between 1987 and 1991, 12% of household savings were invested in equity and corporate debentures as compared to only 7% between 1982 and 1985, signifying the increasing number of retail investors in the stock market. With the increasing interest of retail investors, many dubious companies that did not have any real plans to do business raised money by issuing shares, only to vanish at a later date. These malpractices took on significant proportions and the grievances of retail investors increased alarmingly. The investors turned to GoI for redressal. However, GoI was rather helpless in solving the retail investors' grievances in such large volumes because of the lack of proper penal provisions. The government, therefore, constituted SEBI as a supervisory body to regulate and promote security markets.

The Regulator

The Indian economy was liberalized in 1991. In order to achieve the full potential of liberalization and enable the Indian stock market to attract huge investments from foreign institutional investors (FIIs), it was necessary to introduce a series of stock market reforms. SEBI's efforts to boost investments in the capital markets faced a severe setback in 1992 when Mehta's illegal activities led to a stock market scam. Mehta had managed to obtain huge funds from top banks and financial institutions in India, including State Bank of India, Stanchart, National Housing Bank, Citibank and ANZ Grindlays, to manipulate stock prices, which rose significantly. Between September 1991 and April 1992, the BSE index went up by 143%. However, when the prices crashed, several small investors lost their hard-earned money. The amount involved in this crisis was approximately Rs.54 bn. SEBI's inefficiency in regulating the markets was brought to light for the first time. A journalist commented, "Harshad Mehta in 1992 had caught the SEBI napping".

The Setback

In the mid-1990s, another incident happened, which had a negative impact on SEBI's reputation. In 1995, Pawan Sachdeva, the Managing Director and a major shareholder in a shoe manufacturing company - MS Shoes was alleged to have rigged the prices of his company's shares. MS Shoes launched a public issue of Rs 4.28 bn in February 1995 at Rs 199 per share. Simultaneously, the company had also planned to have a rights issue totalling Rs 2.71 bn. The company went for an advertisement campaign just before the public issue, highlighting that the share offered to the public at Rs. 199 was at a steep discount as compared to the existing market price of Rs 505 on the BSE.

The Reformer

In spite of the setbacks faced by SEBI, it continued its efforts to introduce more capital market reforms in India, making the markets an attractive investment destination for FIIs. According to SEBI, a significant increase was witnessed in the volume and amount of stock transactions done on BSE and NSE. In the fiscal 1993-94, the average amount of total transactions per day was valued at Rs 8 bn, which had increased tenfold to Rs. 80 bn in 1998-99.

The Crash

SEBI's role as a regulator of Indian capital markets was once again questioned on March 02, 2001, when the BSE index crashed by 176 points. This was the result of the large position taken by a stockbroker - Ketan Parikh (KP) in ten stocks, popularly known as K10. The companies in which KP held high equity stakes included Amitabh Bachchan Corporation Limited, Mukta Arts, Tips, Pritish Nandy Communications, HFCL, Global Telesystems, Zee Telefilms, Crest Communications and Penta Media Graphics. He had huge exposures in these stocks, which required a lot of money. Reportedly, KP borrowed from various companies and banks for this purpose.

The Reasons

Analysts felt that the major reason for SEBI's failure to protect investors against scams was lack of skilled human capital. For instance, they quoted the example of the KP scam in which KP had taken huge positions in ten stocks. In spite of SEBI possessing this information, it could not gauge KP's vested interests in acquiring these huge positions and his illegitimate plans...

Restoring Investor Confidence

In a poll conducted in early 2002 by Equity Master, an equity research company in India, over 90% of the respondents believed that the regulatory environment was not sufficient to protect the rights of retail investors in India. Bajpai realized that SEBI had to change this belief of retail investors. He said, "Restoring the confidence of retail investors in the market will be an important task of SEBI." Bajpai decided to achieve this objective by focusing on investor education, corporate governance, transparency and enforcement of regulations..

Issues

1. Examine the roles and responsibilities of a capital market regulator
2. Understand the capital market reforms initiated by a regulatory authority and their benefits to the retail investors
3. A Identify the loopholes in the financial system that allows capital market scams to happen and suggest a suitable course of action to avoid them
4. Appreciate the complexity of a growing market like China
5. Discuss the future of Indian capital market and the role of SEBI
